Bring the bold flavors and rustic charm of Texas straight to your kitchen with the official cookbook from the legendary Perini Ranch Steakhouse. Known for its award-winning mesquite-grilled beef and classic Southern comfort food, this culinary treasure invites you to experience the true taste of the Lone Star State.

A BITE OF HISTORY, FROM TOM'S PERSPECTIVE

My parents bought this ranch back in the 1930s when the family lived in Abilene. My father, a prologist, enjoyed being a weekend rancher. Among the three Perini sons, I in particular found it a joyous place to spend time. Back then, you could drive at age 14, and from that moment on, I started inviting my friends to hang out here. We might have cut school a few times. I used a beater-up grill to cook burgers to go with the beer and liquor we managed to smuggle when our parents weren't watching. By the time I was in my 20s though, I was enjoying city life in Dallas and selling real estate, and the ranch was far from my mind. When Dad passed away in 1966, my mother said, "It's time to come home and manage the ranch." I wasn't thrilled with her pronouncement, but I respected my mother's wish, and didn't want this piece of family history to slip away, so back to the ranch I went. I quickly discovered that while ranching and agriculture make a wonderful lifestyle, they are difficult ways to make a living. I loved being a cowboy, but it was awfully hard work. I was fortunate to fall in with some other more experienced ranchers—including a dear friend of my father's, Walt Matthews, from the Lambhead Ranch near Albany, Texas—who tried their best to help me out. However, between market prices, weather, insects, and other acts of God, it was a struggle to make ends meet. Heck, the ends weren't really meeting at all. I was losing more land to make a bigger cattle operation, but seemed to make only enough money to pay taxes, then had to ask the bank to give me another loan to keep it going. I found myself remembering the simpler times when I went to the ranch and grilled those burgers, and found myself wanting to spend time cooking rather than cowboy-ing. I've always been fascinated with Texas history and was drawn further to cooking through the old chuck wagon tradition of feeding the cowboys and ranch hands. I had seen a lot of the old wagons around the ranches of the area, but these mobile kitchens were falling into disrepair, a relic from an earlier time, when the range was open and epic

Oven-Roasted
Beef Tenderloin

SERVES 6

STEAK RUB

- 3 tablespoons kosher salt
- 1/2 teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon granulated garlic
- 1/2 teaspoon ground dried oregano
- 1/2 teaspoon granulated onion
- 1/2 teaspoon beef bouillon powder
- Pinch of ground white pepper

Get 2 1/2-pound beef tenderloins, silvered and surface fat removed Extra virgin olive oil

When you want luxurious beef for a dinner party but have limited time, or don't want to bother firing up the grill, here's the tenderloin for you. Our signature dry-spice rub for steaks helps form a crust on the tenderloin and boosts the buttery meat's flavor without masking it. Should you be lucky enough to have any leftovers, check out the ideas that follow. When you want a single appetizer to pass or for people to assemble themselves, make it a top choice, whether using this roasted tenderloin or a Marquette Smoked Peppered Beef Tenderloin shipped from periniranch.com.

1. Heat the oven to 475°F. Combine all the rub ingredients in a small bowl. Brush the tenderloin lightly with a couple of teaspoons olive oil. Completely coat the tenderloin with all of the rub, pushing it into every little nook.
2. Rub a roasting rack with a teaspoon of oil so the meat and rub won't stick to it. Arrange the tenderloin on the rack and place in the roasting pan. Insert a meat thermometer into the thickest part of the tenderloin.
3. Plan on a total roasting time of 30 to 35 minutes. Place the tenderloin in the oven and cook for 10 minutes. Reduce the heat to 425°F and continue roasting for 20 to 25 minutes, until the thermometer reads 130°F (medium-rare). Transfer the meat to a cutting board and let it sit for 10 minutes before slicing.

PEAR & RED CABBAGE SALAD

YIELD: 4 SERVINGS / ACTIVE TIME: 20 MINUTES / TOTAL TIME: 35 MINUTES

A buckwheat-based granola would be a lovely route to take for the topping here.

1. Place the olive oil in a large skillet and warm it over medium heat. Add the cabbage and cook, stirring occasionally, until it is just tender, 6 to 8 minutes.

2. Transfer the cabbage to a salad bowl, cover it with some of the vinaigrette, and let it marinate for 15 minutes.

3. Add the salad greens and pour to the salad bowl and toss to combine.

4. Top with the granola and serve with the remaining vinaigrette.

INGREDIENTS:

- 1 TABLESPOON EXTRA-VIRGIN OLIVE OIL

SPICY BEEF SALAD

YIELD: 4 SERVINGS / ACTIVE TIME: 20 MINUTES / TOTAL TIME: 35 MINUTES

Placing the steak in the freezer for a brief spell is the key to getting slices with the desired thickness here.

1. Place the steak in the freezer and chill for 15 minutes.

2. Remove the steak from the freezer and slice it as thin as possible against the grain.

3. Place the steaks in a large skillet and warm it over medium heat. Add the steak, season with salt and pepper, and cook until it is to your liking, stirring as necessary. Remove the pan from heat and set it aside.

4. Place the lettuce, cucumber, spinach, and carrot in a salad bowl and toss to combine. Add the lime juice and olive oil and toss to coat.

5. Divide the salad among the serving plates and top each portion with some of the steak. Garnish with cilantro and serve.

INGREDIENTS:

- 1 LB. FLANK STEAK

Dedicated to mastering photography as a visual language, this book helps you explore what to shoot and how to understand your own work. With 21 detailed chapters on photography techniques and practices, Forbes teaches you not only to establish yourself as a photographer, but how to create a legacy.

THE IDEA OF COMMUNICATION is fundamental to our experience as humans. It's how we express our wants and needs. It's how we show affection and express emotion. It's a tool we use to express support, empathy, disagreement, and even disdain. Humans do not inherently exist in isolation; therefore the ideas of "showing" and "sharing" are part of our existence, as well as where our passion for life originates.

While most of us consider language to be the default method of communicating, visual imagery is sometimes more powerful in how it can transcend a localized, spoken language. This is why iconography is used so heavily in public signage. Understanding traffic lights, directions, warnings, or even how to find the bathroom—these ideas are expressed using universal iconography that can be understood no matter what country you're from or what language you speak.

Art has this function as well but can take the viewer even farther. Art can often command more of one's attention, and it certainly lends itself to interpretation. For example, you and I might absolutely love the same painting, but that painting means something different to each of us. The best art makes us think. Visual art is, at its core, an important and powerful form of communication.

There is a great deal of evidence that suggests that visual art predates language as a form of communication. We can begin by considering the very earliest examples of visual expression, which were usually drawn on rocks or on the walls of caves. Note that caves are insulated and protected. They survived the millennia and are here today. But there is plenty that hasn't survived.

The evidence we do have, however, has created a debate in modern paleontology: At what point did humans begin to exhibit "modern" behaviors of communicating or creating? This is typically studied through the artifacts—objects such as stone tools or markings left behind on rocks or caves. A tool certainly indicates problem-solving, at least for one's self. But a strong case for using visual pictures to communicate is currently being made with the Blombos Cave complex on the Cape coast of South Africa (70,000 BCE) and the Bhimbetka rock shelters in Central India (at least 293,000 BCE).

The Blombos Cave features line renderings composed in rock. The Bhimbetka rockshelters feature stick figures of humans and animals in various configurations. Abstract ideas such as the ordering and stacking of stones or the outlines of handprints suggest at least the idea of expression. Some archeologists

Thinking of color as it's taught in traditional art education is difficult to apply to photography for a number of reasons. For one, we don't have the level of intentionally selecting color like a painter or designer has. We can make color choices in certain situations, but not to the level of other media. Yes, the idea of Photoshop voids my argument, but I'm a firm believer of preserving at least a degree of intent from the point of capture. Falsely interpreting color is retouching, not photography. Retouching implies the photographer couldn't finish the job.

We also don't mix paint. We can control color appearance in postproduction, like I have explained above in the perception of film looks. But we're not working with paint on a palette. It's a digital approach and much different. But there are things we can control that have an effect on the final picture.

have a grayscale value. When placed next to each other, they represent the greatest contrast value for the pair.

In the RGB color model, these pairs are red/green, yellow/purple, and blue/orange.

Color Relationships

Typically, color is shown on some type of color wheel as established by Isaac Newton. This is a way of presenting color hues and how they relate to one another. Color models are designed around their three primary colors. The color wheel traditionally taught in color theory is based on the RYB (Red Yellow Blue) color model. But there is also the RGB (Red Green Blue) color model, which is used in more modern applications.

Complementary colors are pairs that exist opposite from each other on the wheel. When combined, they cancel each other out to produce a grayscale value.

In the RGB color model, the complementary colors are red/cyan, green/magenta, and blue/yellow.
